AMUNEMENTS.

Mrs. Anderson's "Parthenia." Last night Miss Mary Anderson opened up an engagement at the Memphis Theater, as "Parthenia," in Madame Buch Phyffer's play of Ingomar. She were a classic Grezian dress, and played the part and looked it better than anyone within the remembrance of the present generation of playgoers, and they were, perforce, compelled to acknowledge that she played well. Ingomar is a play that has for years retained its well-deserved popularity, for it is interesting from first to last, cleverly constructed, and tastefully executed. Only now and then do we hear crop out high-flown sentiments, clothed in stilted language; but the scenes between "Ingomar" and "Parthenia" over-flow with a simplicity and natural feeling that at once charm, and the love that softens the rough hero and finds an echo in the heart of the Greek maiden is developed in a manner that at once touches the sympathies of the audience and retains them. "Parthenia" is not a difficult part to act; it possesses the sympathies of the audience from the first. But it requires an actress of intelligence to pre-vent it from becoming monotonous. This merit we beheld in Miss Mary Anderson. Her be filled with the beauty and fashion of the

The Knight of the "Hely Grail." Last night Colonel Lewis Selby attended nis seat, and, gazing for a few seconds at "Ingomar," the Barbarian, exclaimed, "You're a liar." Colonel Selby was visited by the ushers and requested not to give way his emotions or express his feelings andidy. Colonel Selby saw but the romantic aspect of the matter, but he could not brook e idea of a chief barbarian of the fierce German tribe calling a beautiful Greek girl a "slave." He was willing, like a knight of the middle ages, a follower of King Arthur, nder of the "Holy Grail," to do battle with any barbarian in defense of beauty. "Parthenia" (Mi-s Anderson) and "Ingomar" (Mr. Norton), when they heard Colonel Sely, looked at the champion of unprotected nocence and beauty and se med amazed at the interruption. Many of the audience thought that some one had cried out "fire" when they heard the word "liar" hissed orth by the chivalrous Lou Selby. The Enights of Innisfall

Washington, January 4.—Only six days more and the congressional holidays will have ended, and the representatives of the people will again address themselves to legislation of which there is as much of impormerit we beheld in Miss Mary Anderson. Her performance was thoroughly charming. Miss Anderson was well supported by Mr. John W. Norlon as "Ingomar" and the stock company engaged for the southern tour. The audience—a large, fashionable and critical one—applauded the performance, as d compelled Miss Anderson to appear before the curtain, and bow her acknowledgments. Tonight Bulwer's beautiful but love-sick play, the Lady of Lyons, will be given, with Miss Anderson as "Pauline," and Mr. Norton as "Claude." Sentimental young ladies and gentlemen never weary of this play, and it may safely be predicted that the house will also speak at length on the same side, in an indirect way, to be benefited by it, so much the better. And this, I think, they are sure to get from the present congress. Colonel Casey Young's bill has many friends, and will have many more before the debate and southwest, and make, as his friends expect, an able and exhaustive argument for silver as part of the legal currency contemplated by the constitution. Stanley Mathews will also speak at length on the same side, is inclined to believe that in this instance his tance as has ever been brought before the safely be predicted that the house will will also speak at length on the same side, is inclined to believe that in this instance his and there will no doubt be many long and strong "talks" by able representatives of the money-grabbers. The east is much excited the theater. He took his usual seat, near the orchestra, and was in his chronic state of inebriety. When "Ingomar" called "Parthenia" a slave, Colonel Seiby rose from abuse of what they term the repudiators.

The Herald, which has hitherto been the mildest and most forbearing among them, yesterday, in an article upon the saturnalia of fraud which has been for the most part confined to New York city—its savings banks, trust fund and life insurance com-panies, and the Bonners and Netties of Wall street, uses the following language: "The ingenuity of criminals in devising cunning methods of theft should not be permitted to protect them. But we doubt if the State prison alone can affect a radical cure. The disease is too deeply seated and too widely spread to be eradicated without a removal of its causes. It has seized whole communities and converted them into repudiators;

but who shall draw indictments against all "the silver swindlers of the west?"
"Silver swindlers of the west,"
is a mild expression, comprehensive as it is, when compared with what the Tribune and the Times used. But hard words butter no parnips. Expressions like these only tend to intensify the determination of those against whom they are directed. The "silver swindlers" of the west will have their way, and the east may therefore be indulged in the harmless cursing, swearing and abuse through and by which impotent passion usually expends itself. The money power has had its day in controlling legislation. Having abused that day and selfishly hedged for it-self and against the producing and laboring interests of the country, it ought to be thankful to escape with the silver bill and to find that all the laws by which it sequestered the peoples earnings for years to come have not been repealed. But even this extremity may be reached if, by the extraordinary efforts and combinations now being made the and combinations now being made, the silver bill is defeated. Should such a contingency occur (and I do not think it possible, so well are the friends of silver organized) there is no knowing where the storm of opposition to bondholders, corporations and noneyed sharks would end. Wholesale repudiation would no doubt follow and wide-spread disaster. The people would seek re-lief by extraordinary, violent and revolution-ary means, and in a few days unsettle the confidence established by centuries of labor.

They would then revenge themselves for the repudiation by its corporations by the punish-ment of Lambert and Case in the penitentiary, much yet remains to be done. More than sixty such thieves have been allowed to go on their way unwhipped of justice. other means that can be devised for the purpose. The New York Times, in an article opposed to Colonel Young's bill, closes with this paragraph, which I give as a specimen of the misunderstanding of the subject and of the seemingly purposed misrepresentation of the people of the south, in which that journal habitually indulges. The Times says: "When the natural levees of the Great Build-"er are so destroyed, what is to protect the "patchwork structures of congressional com-"patchwork structures of congressional com-"missions from absolute annihilation? Un-"til this question is answered, and until it is "demonstrated that the proposed levees "would perform the services expected of "them, it would be just as well for southern "congressmen to cease asking for forty-five "million dellars to aid in their construction." "In the meantime, it might be well for the "planters of the lower Mississippi valley to "imitate their northern brethren by building "their own dykes and ditches." If the writer

"their own dykes and ditches." If the writer of this had known anything about the Mississippi and its movements, he could not have fallen into so gross an error, even to give point to the hate of the Times for anything southern. If there are any natural levees by the Great Builder that are being destroyed he ought to have pointed them out. Certainly they are not known to the people of the Mississippi valley. If by the great natural levees he refers to the Chickasaw range of hills which run parallel with and close to the river in some places, I think and close to the river in some places, I think the people of the States washed by the Mis-sissippi have yet to learn that they have sufthe people of the States washed by the Mississippi have yet to learn that they have suffered such impairment by the abrasion of the river as to entail serious consequences to any one. As with that devoted to the "natural levees," so with the closing sentence of this stupidly malignant paragraph. The writer ought to know that the northern States and people have had nearly one hundred millions. people have had nearly one hundred millions of dollars for harbor and river improvements to twelve or fifteen expended in the south for similar purposes by the government, and that all the levees so far built—and they are many and valuable, especially in Mississippi —are the work of the States. The planters of the south have no lessons in that regard to learn from the people of the north, especially since all the dykes and ditches they have would not together make a work equal to the admirable levee system of Mississippi. The improvement of the great river is a na-tional work, one that the Federal government can alone direct and control, and whether it is accomplished as General Humphreys sug-gests, and as Colonel Casey Young proposes in his bill, or by some plant yet to be devised, our people care not. "northern people need just such homes as await them in the south. And this intermingling of northern people will restore tranquility to our whole nation. The question is asked: 'How about the matter of caste, society, equality and all that?' We answer, manliness and merit are appreciated in the south as fully as they are in the north. Nothing need be feared on this question. Churches and schools are abundant, society is good, and in the matter of warm-hearted friend hip the people of the south excel those of the north. To the reader who would like to know what part of the south affords the finest openings, we say, take your map and draw a line from New York to San Antonio, Texas, and you will find the direct line carrying you a little to the south of Memphis.'

In furtherance of this scheme, which receives so handsome an indorsement as this, which Colonel Sam Jones informs me is but one of many, I think our own people can do a great deal more than they have yet done. Paying speculations await those who will venture upon the work of colonising. By purchasing large bodies of land and selling alternate farms of one hundred and sixty acres to actual settlers at cost prices enough might, within a reasonable time, be made from the sale of what remained to compensate handsomely for the outlay and trouble. In its spirit, pur-pose and traditions it is wholly foreign to Mr. Hayes, and he to it. Such an alliance, therefore, could not fail to be productive of more harm than good to the country at large as well as to our party. The views of Democratic statesmen, with one or two notabl exceptions, are in nearly all things affecting the administration of the government opposed to those of Mr. Hayes. There could not be anything like accord and agreement between Democratic policy. tween Democrats and him. Democratic policy is not Republican policy; if it were, there would be no need for the political divisions which the names imply. For these reasons Mr. Hayes cannot expect to make even an alliance offensive and defensive with the Democracy. To us such a thing would bring demoralization and disaster; at best, perhaps, a few offices to hungry office ers, whose impatience overrides all consideration of principle and party fealty. He must be left to the tender mercies of Conking and Ben Butler. He belongs to them. The Republican party, of which they are the ablest living leaders, made him all that he is, and it is proper, if that party wills it, that they should discipline him in its name for his attempts, as they say, at self-will and self-purpose, and his desertion, as they hold, of its policy and violation of its integrity. "It is none of our funeral." It is rumored that Austria and Germany have vetoed the idea of opening the Dardanelles to Russian vessels only. Russia has, consequently, determined not to raise the question at all.

A telegram from Rome, dated at noon yesterday, says that King Victor Immanuel passed a comparatively quiet night, but his fever continues to increase, with a further extension of pleurisy. The accidents of the season—breaking through the ice—begin to burden the telegraph wires. Two girls, aged eleven and fifteen, were drowned in this way at Hyannis, Massachusetts, yes-

The President has pardoned John T. Toombs, convicted of using cancelled postage stamps for payment of postage and sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment in the Kentucky penitentiary.

When the news of the serious illness the king of Italy reached the pope, the latter asked the cardinals who were present with him: "What will happen if the Vatican and the Quirinal both become vacant?"

The New Orleans chamber of commerce yesterday passed a resolution protesting against the passage of the Bland silver-bill. The chamber of commerce and cotton exchange will both send delegates to the Washington convention in response to the Pittsburg resolutions.

Ragusa dispatches state that Antivari still holds out, although it has been burning in several places since Sunday. It is reported to be provisioned for another month. The Turks are marching from Karkza to endeavor to succor the besieged. A Turklish fronclad is to bombard the works of the Montenegrins.

Dispatches from various points in New England show that the cold was intense yesterday, ranging from twenty-four degrees below zero at Nashua, New Hampshire, to forty-two degrees below at Fort Fairfield, Maine. Along the Hudson the thermometer marks several degrees below zero, and ice-boat clubs are preparing for their annual contest. In New York city it was fourteen degrees above zero, and becoming colder.
